ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

CREAW is grateful to the networks and communities, more so to the women who we work with and who give meaning to our work. It is our hope that this Strategic Plan will be a noble reference towards achieving CREAW’s Vision A just society where women and girls enjoy full rights and live in dignity and Mission To champion, expand and actualise women’s and girls’ rights and social justice.

Our special acknowledgement goes to the following external consultants; Mr. Tom, for facilitating the preparation and compilation of the Strategic Plan, Prof Wambui Mwangi and Mr. Donald Mogeni who greatly contributed to reviewing the plan, making it the document that it is today.

We acknowledge the visionary leadership of the CREAW Board of Directors led by the Chairperson, Ms. Rukia Yassin and the tireless input, efforts and dedication of CREAW’s staff members, in particular the strategic plan committee Mike Gachanja, Angelina Cikanda, Joshua Ayuo, Dennis Hombe, Christine Ogutu, Dinah Saisi, Mercy Jelimo, Isabella Mwangi, David Kyalo, Beatrice Njeri and Antonia Wanjiku Musunga through their active participation and contribution towards the development, review and finalization of the plan.

The development and production of the Centre for Rights, Education and Awareness (CREAW) Strategic Plan 2019-2023 was through the invaluable support of it’s development partners; Open Society for East Africa OSIEA, Embassy of the Kingdom of Netherlands, UNWomen, ForumSyd, Amkeni- Wakenya, Wellsprings Philanthropic Fund and UN Trust Fund to whom we are deeply indebted and hereby acknowledge. We look forward to greater collaboration in the future.

FOREWORD

Established in 1999, the Centre for Rights Education and Awareness (CREAW) is a national, feminist women’s rights Non-Governmental Organization (NGO) operating in Kenya. CREAW envisions a just society where women and girls enjoy full rights and live in dignity. The mission of CREAW is to champion, expand and actualise women and girls' rights and social justice.

CREAW understands that gender inequality violates women’s and girls’ rights, constrains their choices and voices and impacts negatively on their ability to fully participate in and benefit from development processes. We also believe that gender equality is not only a basic human right, but also a crucial element in accelerating sustainable development.

It comes as a great pleasure to present the CREAW Strategic Plan 2019–2023. The Plan outlines CREAW’s vision and ambitions and key interventions for achieving them. The choices contained in the Plan are largely informed by the lessons learnt, conclusions and recommendations from the analysis of CREAW’s operating context.

Drawing from lessons learnt from our past practice, and building on our track record, this Strategic Plan seeks to effectively position CREAW within the emerging operating context as a basis of ensuring greater relevance and effectiveness. The Plan sets out broad parameters that will guide the development of more specific annual work plans and program documents.

CREAW will continue its work towards elimination of gender inequality and all forms of discrimination against women and girls. This is based on our philosophy that empowering women demands that we address unfair cultural norms and attitudes, enhance competencies of women and their institutions and advocate for the development and implementation of progressive legal, policy and institutional frameworks that promote/sustain gender equality.

This strategy is the outcome of a co-creation process between the CREAW Team and several stakeholders. We deeply appreciate their contribution to this process. We especially wish to extend sincere gratitude to our board members, partners and peers for the moral, financial and material support accorded to us during the Strategic Plan development process.

We also wish to thank in advance our partners and peers who will continue to subscribe to our vision by collaborating with us towards the operationalisation of this Plan. In particular, we call upon our valued partners to join hands with us as we venture into this exiting, ambitious and equally challenging phase of our journey. We believe that with your confidence and support, we shall attain our goals, and make a meaningful difference in the quality of life of women and girls in Kenya.

We look forward to a period of unlimited possibilities, courage, and most importantly, the advancement of women’s human rights.

1. Our roadmap to social change / philosophy

Our work is premised on the foundation that everyone deserves a dignified life, and that this is attainable. We thus dedicate resources and capabilities to protect, promote and actualize women’s and girls’ rights and freedoms as a basis of addressing prevailing systemic gendered inequalities, oppression, exploitation and discrimination.

As catalysts of the change we want to see, we support strategic and innovative initiatives, and collaborate with progressive thinkers - irrespective of gender, age, race, class, education or affiliations - to reach these ideals. Our work draws from universal human rights principles and protocols. We pursue social justice as an approach to engineering transformation in the spaces we seek to influence.

2. Who we are

The Center for Rights Education and Awareness (CREAW) is a feminist organization with a national presence in Kenya. Since its establishment in 1999, CREAW has worked to eliminate the gender norms and barriers that perpetuate inequality among women and men. We are driven by the drive to see women and girls able to lead, move freely in their communities and have access to equal opportunities.

3. Organizational identity

1. Voice refers to being able to speak up and be heard, and to shape and share in discussions and decisions. Agency is about ability to make choices about one’s own life and act upon them without violence, retribution or fear.
4. The operational context

External context analysis
Operational context

Regulatory and institutional frameworks - Kenya has made notable strides in establishing regulatory and institutional frameworks in efforts to ensure gender equality. These provisions include the Constitution of Kenya (CoK) 2010, enactment of laws focusing on gender and equality, and the ratification of several international and regional protocols that address gender inequality. There also exists a robust system of agencies responsible for coordinating gender mainstreaming in policies and programs within the government, among them the Department of Gender affairs within the ministry of Public Service, Youth and Gender affairs. Despite the existence of these robust regulatory and institutional frameworks, there exists a major challenge in implementing and operationalizing them.

Gendered inequality remains robust as many women and girls in Kenya still lack access to opportunities and resources in various sectors such as education, health, and leadership. This is due to patriarchal customary practices, structural and institutionalized barriers, and socialization of women’s primary roles as wives and/or mothers.

Social and cultural norms/perceptions Patriarchal interpretations of cultural practices still assert male dominance and perpetuate harmful stereotypes that portray women negatively. Patriarchal notions of male dominance commonly manifest in VAWG, with SGBV being the most widespread socially tolerated human rights violation.

General capacity constraints - The millennium Project Task Force on Education and Gender Equality identified three critical dimensions of women empowerment: intrinsic competencies, agency and voice, and access to opportunities and resources. Additionally, there exists structural challenges around gender-insensitive fiscal policies and discriminatory social norms. Collective action plays a pivotal role in building momentum for progressive reform.

Women and Technology Access to and the ability to understand and use technologies can have a positive impact on women’s freedom of expression, education and employment opportunities. In Sub-Saharan Africa, women are 45% less likely to have access to the internet than men. Low connectivity and cultural limitations are prevents women and girls from maximizing the use of technology. Other barriers include high cost of access, illiteracy and regressive cultural norms. There is therefore need to break these barriers as ICT can provide women with innovative pathways to meaningful participation in the economy, improved safety, and access to financial services. Further, digital media can make it easier for women to amplify each other’s ideas, whilst social networking sites are useful tools for social activism and movement building.

6. Priorities and key strategies

Premised on our theory of change CREA’W – together with its partners - will promote women’s and girls’ rights, freedoms and entitlements by addressing the intersecting structural barriers to women’s and girl’s wellbeing, rather than merely meeting their needs.

Appreciating the need for greater depth of focus, we will pay attention to four thematic areas that we not only have a track record in, but which we believe hold the potential to bring the greatest impact to the wellbeing of women and girls, granted the Kenyan operational context.

The four areas are:

- Elimination of economic and social-cultural discrimination
- Ending all forms of violence against women and girls
- Promoting effective participation of women and girls
- Ensuring universal access to SRHR

Three overarching strategies will be explored across the four critical pathways of change. These will be:

- Influencing institutional/regulatory frameworks and cultural norms
- Systems Strengthening and Capacity Development:
- Solidarity/movement building
We commit to the realization of this dream by contributing to:

- Existence of gender responsive regulatory and institutional structures and the political will to fully implement these;
- Ending gender discriminatory practices, harmful social norms and unequal access to decision-making power; and
- Investing in empowering (capacity development of) women, girls and their organizations to (better) claim their rights and seize opportunities to create change.
7. Theory of change

Intermediate Outcomes

- Increased voice and agency for women & girls
- More balanced gender power relations
- Generating and sharing new knowledge and evidence
- Increased access to quality integrated services (e.g. SRH, SGBV responses etc)

Ultimate Outcomes

- Women & Girls enjoy full rights & live in dignity
- Inclusive & equitable structures & institutions
- In the following thematic areas:
  - More balanced gender power relations
  - Increased access to quality integrated services (e.g. SRH, SGBV responses etc)
  - Inclusive & equitable structures & institutions

Assumptions

CREAW believes that elimination of gender inequality and discrimination is a long-term process that requires changes in social norms, especially power relations, at individual, community, and institutional levels.

We understand that sustainable systems level changes in this regard will require collective power and engagements across sectors, levels and generations. We hope that all concerned actors/leaders will have enough political willpower towards such change, and subsequently make the necessary investments needed to confront gender inequalities and in turn empower women and girls.

1. Elimination of economic & Social-Cultural discrimination.
2. Eradication of VAW/G and harmful practices.
3. Women in Leadership.
4. Universal access to SRHR.

What we exist to do

- Advocating for conducive policy environment, gender progressive cultural norms, and the political will to actualize these.
- Empowering women and strengthening the capacity of service delivery systems & self.
- Promoting coalitions and solidarity building.
- Generating and sharing new knowledge and evidence.

To contribute to ending gender inequality and violations of women and girls’ right

Greater access to, and or control over resources, benefits & opportunities

- Existence & enforcement of gender progressive norms, laws, policies and regulations.
- Freedom from SGBV and other harmful and or discriminative practices.

Increased access to quality integrated services (e.g. SRH, SGBV responses etc)

- Inclusive & equitable structures & institutions.
- In the following thematic areas:
  - More balanced gender power relations
  - Increased access to quality integrated services (e.g. SRH, SGBV responses etc)
  - Inclusive & equitable structures & institutions.

Impact

- Women & Girls enjoy full rights & live in dignity.
- More balanced gender power relations.
- Inclusive & equitable structures & institutions.

Intermediate Outcomes

- Increased voice and agency for women & girls.
- More balanced gender power relations.
- Generating and sharing new knowledge and evidence.
- Increased access to quality integrated services (e.g. SRH, SGBV responses etc).

Ultimate Outcomes

- Women & Girls enjoy full rights & live in dignity.
- Inclusive & equitable structures & institutions.
- In the following thematic areas:
  - More balanced gender power relations.
  - Increased access to quality integrated services (e.g. SRH, SGBV responses etc).

8. Strategies

8.1 Thematic areas of focus

Premised on our theory of change CREAW – together with its partners - will promote securing of women’s and girls’ rights, freedoms and entitlements by addressing the intersecting structural barriers to women’s and girl’s wellbeing, acting on four areas:

1. Elimination of economic and social-cultural discrimination
2. Ending all forms of violence against women and girls;
3. Promoting effective participation of women and girls; and
4. Ensuring universal access to SRHR.

8.2 Thematic area 1: Elimination of economic and social-cultural discrimination

Overview: Gender inequality not only affects women socially, but also impedes their economic and social development. According to the African Development Bank (AfDB), eliminating gender inequality could raise the productive potential of one billion Africans. Thus, gender mainstreaming of policy formulation is essential for sustainable growth and poverty reduction. This pillar will focus on eliminating inequalities that deprive women and girls of basic rights, resources and opportunities.

Regarding economic empowerment, we will play an enabler role, rather than direct implementation. The aim shall be to position women and girls to access economic resources and opportunities, as well as to strengthen their enterprise initiatives. In all cases, CREAW shall attend to both the demand and supply sides of applicable business relations.

Objective

i: To contribute to securing of women’s equal access to rights and opportunities.
ii: To contribute to securing of women’s equal access to, ownership and use of economic resources and or opportunities.

8.3 Thematic area 2: Ending violence against women and girls

Overview: VAWG is among the most oppressive forms of gender inequality and a fundamental barrier to equal participation of women in social, economic and political spheres. According to UN Women the best way of addressing VAWG is to prevent it from happening in the first place.

Objective: To contribute to prevention of VAWG and response for survivors of VAWG.

8.4 Thematic area 3: Effective participation of women in leadership

Overview: Patriarchal underpinnings of the African society undermine prospects of women’s leadership in social, economic and political spaces. This thematic focus areas seeks to increase presence of women leaders at all decision-making levels across all spheres, as well as promotion of an environment where women are encouraged to lead and succeed. Besides political leadership, CREAW will facilitate establishment of pipelines of women leaders to take up leadership in public and private spaces such as private sector, SACCOs, market associations and boards of various State institutions.

1 https://www.bsr.org/reports/BSR_Womens_Empowerment_Africa_Main_Report.pdf
Objective: To contribute to ensuring equal opportunities for, and full participation of women in leadership positions across all spheres and spaces.

8.5 Thematic area 4: Supporting universal access to SRHR

Overview: SRHR implies that people can have a fulfilling and safe sex life and that they have the capability to reproduce and the freedom to decide, if, when and how often to do so. This thematic area seeks to contribute to creating an enabling environment for the realization of SRHR of women and girls by addressing barriers of such as limited access to, stigmatisation of and or discrimination of users and providers of SRHR services.

Objective: To facilitate increased access to comprehensive and integrated SRHR services. Strategic Interventions

8.6 Thematic area 5: Institutional development

This strategic pillar will mainly focus on internal well-being of CREAW. It is inward looking and seeks to address the gaps identified in the SWOT analysis of CREAW.

The overall objective of this pillar is ‘to become an effective, resilient and sustainable organization’. Several institutional areas will be addressed under this pillar amongst them the following:

8.6.1 Resource mobilization, marketing and partnerships development

Objective: To acquire and reserve adequate resources to assure CREAW’s sustainably.

8.6.2 Research and monitoring evaluation research & learning (MERL)

Objective: To generate, document and share quality data for organisational learning.
accountability and influencing.

8.6.3 Human Resources Management

Objective: To attract and retain required numbers of high-quality staff and leaders.
